STRAIGHT SHOTS IN THE NAVY.

By Arnold White. Since the Japaneso Alliance with Great Britain was published to the world European groups have formed closer alliances. France has drawn nearer to Russia, Germany to Italy and Austria. Japan cannot help England in the Channel or the; Meditermnean. When the naval Armageddon comes it will be fought by Britain without European allies and in European waters. Victory will depend, not merely on the number and quality of the ships, but mainly on the straight shooting of their

It is thus apparent that the whole future of the British Empire rosts in the last resort upon the skill of our naval gunnery officers and blue jackets. Taken as a whole, the prize-firing in the Navy is unsatisfactory. There are, it is true, brilliant exceptions. The Scylla, which was the best shooting ship in the Fleet in 1899, bear 135 men-of-war with her 6in, and 4.7 quickfiring guns. While the percentage of hitsfor the whole Fleet in 1899 was only 31.1, the Soylla attained a percentage of 46 with the 6in. gun, and of 80 with the 4.7. The best shot of the Scylla was Petry Officer Harvey. In 1900 and 1901 H.M.S. Terrible, under Captain Percy Scott, achieved the double distinction of becoming the best ship in the Floet.

In the former year she competed against 176 ships ; the figures for 1901 are not yet published. We know, however, that whoreas the percentage of hits for the whole Fleet was 32.3, the Terrible in 1900 scored 60 per cent. of hits with her 9.2 quick-firing gun, and 77 per cent. 61 hits with her 6in, gun. This standard of good Shaukiwan Road, under the sign of shooting was increased last year by the the 'Metropole Hotel' to one B. | Terrible to 64 per cent. of hits with the 9.2 gun, and 80 per cont. of hits with the 8m. gun. Petty Officer W. Grounds actually placed eight shots on the target in one minute. Eight rounds were fired.

TWO MISSES TO ONE HIT. The public may well wonder why it is that the percentage of hits for the whole Fleet is only 32.3-that is to say, the 1394 Fleet as a whole, makes two misses for every hit, while the crew of the Terrible. make a percentage of hits higher than two out of three. The public takes less interest in straight shooting at sea than in the Lincoln Handicap. The Earl of Selborne, speaking from his place in the House of Lords, used the words, 'Gunnery, gunthe MILITARY AUTHORITIES very, gumery. Excellent words but unless followed up by business and action the percentage of hits in the British Fleet is not likely to improve. The matter of straight shooting in the Navy must be looked at from different points of view. There is the view of the Admiralty, the view of the admirals, the view of the captain, the view of the gunnery officer, and the view of the crew. The Lords Commissioners of the Admirally, on learning of the high average of hits made by the crow of the Terrible, issued a memotandum expressing their appreciation of the high state of efficiency in that ship. Gunner Grounds, who is the best shot on the best ship in the straightest shooting squadron of the best fleet in the world, received os, from the nation and a share in the praise contained in the memorandum issued by the Lords of the Admiralty. If their lordships, in addition to the issue of a memorandum, were to reward the best man behind the gun as the best rifle shot on shore is rewarded at Bisley, the percentage of hits in the Fleet would rise by leans and BAMPANT RED-TAPEL

But the Admiralty and their spokesmen, the old admirals, are opposed to such newfangled ideas as publicly rewarding and honouring the best shots in the Navy. It is accordingly necessary to appeal to the public. All Admiralty improvements have been the result of agitation outside, and if the shooting of the British Fleet is to be improved the nation must supply the engine power by rewarding the straightest shooters with a larger sum than 5s. -- the remaneration, by the way, for one day's work by a yeomanry private, or about the amount of a Christmas box that would be given to a civil spoken postman.

Intense interest is taken by the men of the lower deck in the subject of straightshooting, and they keenly appreciate expression of sympathy and recognition on the part of the public in their effort to become Intending subscribers are requested to good shots. I have high neval authority for stating that no better stimulus to a healthy rivalry between ships of the Fleet in the matter of straight shooting could be given than by offering tempting rewards to the individuals, not to the ships, who achieve the highest proficiency. This plan, how-ever, is an innovation, and innovation in the naval service is anotherm, maranatha to the officials. The vital question of straight shooting in the Navy has long been treated with levity by the Admiralty, and by many admirals in command of fleets. Why is it that the percentage of hits on flagships is proverbially low? It is because prize-firing is a very painful opera-tion, as anyone can tell who has gone through it. It splits the paint, it shakes the furniture, it rattles the china, it gives one a headache, it gets on one's nerves. The consequence is that cases are known? of admirals who are excellent in other respects who usunage to go on shore while the prize firing is exerted on . This is one reason why the gunners in the Navy only manage to like dee out of three rounds. The next reason, and perhaps the more important cause of had shooting in the Navy, is the fact that captains, officers, and crews are rewarded for bright brasswork.

SO-CALLED SMARTNESS. The so-called supartness which is attained by gold leaf and paint is positively injurious to straight shooting. When, therefore, admirals commend wealthy officers for the amount of gold leaf and paint that they have purchased out of their private resourees the heart is taken out of officers and erews who are desirous of achieving the distinction of belonging to the best shooting ship in the fleet. Captain Percy Scott's efforts to develop the shooting efficiency of the crew of the Terrible amount to genius. That he has sacrificed nothing in the general efficiency of the ship is shown by the last report of the inspecting admiral:--The ship is very clean and well kept. The ship's company are a well-grown lot, and do their work silently, inteligently, and well. " For the last two years the Terrible's hea-

Whitehead practice is satisfactory. . The engine-room department is clean and efficient. . The appearance of the marine detachment was very eceditable.' Gilt, glitter, and uniform occupy too much of the attention of Admiralty officials. If Lord Selborne is serious in desiring to see better shooting in the Fleet, it is quite possible to achieve success. The Lords of the Admiralty should require every admiral in command affort to insist on increased efficiency in gunnery, and for that purpose the Admiralty should issue the most Diseases, Pimples, and Sores of all kinds the stringent orders making it plain to all effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture are ingressions.

there is often friction between the commander and the gunnery officer. If the commander were made responsible he would take greater interest in the ship's percentage of hits, and seeing that he is answemble for the discipline of the ship and for the supply of all working parts required by the gunnery officer it is important to culist the sympathetic interest of commanders in Whale Island, the Cambridge, and Sheerness Gunnery School are the only places where gunnery stands before all else. In forure all sca-going, ships must be schools of gunnery, and the percentage of hits should be raised at least 10 per cent; within a year. How can this be done? First, by public interest in the subject; secondly, by rewards to the men and promotion to the officers; and thirdly, by complete revolution in the Admiralty methods of regarding naval smartness as consisting of gold leaf. bright paint, and polished brass work. has been by far the best of any ship in the san of apinion that the name of Grounds as the best shot of 1901 ought to be as well known in the British Empire as the Derby winner. The ceremony took place in the large ball room which, after His Excellency the Go vernor's long absence, required special preparation for the event, Mr W. J. Tutcher superintending the arrangement of the be satiful palms and greenery, and Sergeat t Gerrard looking after the other details.

His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government attired in his full uniforn was scated on a raised diss having on either side of him a number of the leading ladies and gentlemen of the Colony, whose front of him was a small on which the address were laid. The representatives of the different bodies presenting the Addresses, the heads of Departments, and the leading Naval and Military Officers To His Majesty King Edward VII. occupied a space in front of His Excellency and were separated by a red cord from the remainder of thospacious building, which was occupied by a large and representative body of the general community in full dress.
